MAY EXTEND THEIR LINES TO MARION

L. & N. Getting Into I. C.'s Territory

BRANCHES ARE CONNECTED

Getting Even for Illinois Central Railroad's Nashville Line.

WILL ENTER A PRODUCTIVE FIELD

The Louisville Courier Journal of Sunday, Dec. 2d, 1906, contained the following:

Altho local Louisville and Nashville representatives decline to say in regard to their proposed lines and lines already in process of building in Western Kentucky, it is evident after several of these small extensions are made that connections will have been achieved which will give the L. & N. a line of about 250 miles in length from Louisville in a southwesterly direction toward Paducah. At Paducah another connection will be made with the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, which is controlled by the Louisville and Nashville.

While there is no northern outlet from Paducah at present save thru the Illinois Central lines, the strongest competitor of the L. & N. railroad, rumor says that the Big Four soon will commence the building of an extension of its line from Harrisburg, Ill., to Metropolis, on the Ohio river, which is nearly opposite Paducah. This would give Northern competition as an outlet for freight, which the L. & N. wants now, and would want more if the line from Louisville thru the coal and mineral regions were built.

So long as the Illinois Central confined its operations and extensions to Western Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, the Louisville and Nashville railroad was not much concerned, but when it invaded Nashville, the sacred and heretofore undisputed territory of the L. & N., then a spirit of revenge began to show itself. This apparent spirit of revenge has been fired again by the Illinois Central building a line from Jackson, Tenn., to Birmingham, Ala., tapping the great iron fields on which the L. & N. has almost had a monopoly.

The Illinois Central has been reaping a rich harvest from the coal fields thru which it runs in Western Kentucky, and especially in Crittenden and Livingston counties, where it has had a monopoly on hauling all the output of the lead, zinc, fluor-spar and other fine ore beds that are being so extensively operated in Crittenden and Livingston counties, and which appears to be inexhaustible.

The Louisville and Nashville people are working quietly but steadily on a number of small spur or short lines which when linked together will make a splendid line of road, tapping the richest coal fields in Western Kentucky. The L. & N.'s St. Louis and Nashville line, which runs thru the State from Henderson to Guthrie, tapping the Hopkins county coal regions, is one of its best paying lines. Considerable coal is handled on its line from Owensboro to Russellville, where it connects with the Louisville and Memphis line.

The Louisville & Nashville, having operating connections with the Henderson Route would have a line in its proposed western road extending already from Louisville to Fordsville, Ohio county. The present branch from Irvington on the Main line of the Henderson Route to Fordsville through Hardinsburg is not what is known as a paying branch. The Louisville & Nashville is backing the building of the line from Madisonville to Hartford, county seat of Ohio county. The work is progressing finely. By the building of a line ten or twelve miles long from Hartford to Fordsville a line will be given direct from Louisville to Madisonville, touching the St. Louis and Nashville line. The territory from Madisonville to Hartford is one continuous coal bed.

Already the Louisville & Nashville owns a short line from Madisonville to Providence in Webster county. It is now backing the building of a line Providence to Morganfield, county seat of Union county, which is rich both in coal and agriculture. It will invade the sacred territory of the Illinois Central. From Providence L. & N. can build twenty-five miles or more road and enter Marion, the county seat of Crittenden county, the center of the zinc, lead and fluor-spar industries of Kentucky. This again would give a direct line from Marion to Louisville, a distance about 200 miles. Twenty-five or thirty miles further would take the Louisville & Nashville through Smithland, the county seat of Livingston county, and then on to Paducah, the metropolis of Western Kentucky.

In this section such a line, besides opening up vast territory rich in natural resources, would work a great detriment to the now exclusive business of the Illinois Central. Whether or not the Louisville and Nashville could secure Northern connection out Paducah, the road would tap its own Northern line at Madisonville. What makes the proposed line feasible is the fact that the L. & N. is preparing to double-track its line from Henderson to Nashville. Owing to the numerous and long sidings on this line the work will not be such a stupendous task.

Another probability is brought to light when the spur from Morganfield to Providence is finished by the Louisville & Nashville. From Morganfield fifteen miles west on the Ohio river is found Shawneetown, Ill., where the L. & N. now has a line which starts from its main St. Louis line at McLeansboro, Ill. The line from Morganfield to Shawneetown would tap the greatest and richest corn-producing belt in the State, as well as rich coal beds. Such a road would be a great feeder, though a bridge would never span the Ohio at Shawneetown, which has often been talked of.

A Miraculous Escape.

Maj. F. M. Clement, the well known citizen of the View vicinity, who is as straight as an arrow, notwithstanding the fact he is a grandfather, (although a youthful one) still delights in boyish pranks and like the proverbial boy, sometimes gets into trouble. A few days ago the Major was "projecting" some way with a dynamite cartridge and hit it with a hammer thinking it was not loaded and would not explode. It did explode with a terrific force, throwing particles in every direction. About ten pieces flying lodgment in the Major's physiognomy, and one piece struck between the ball of his eye and his nose, which shows what a narrow escape he made from losing one of his eyes. Dr. Cook was summoned and picked out all the pieces of the shell from his face and altho the wounds bled profusely and were quite painful no complications, such as blood poisoning, which was feared, have arisen and the Major is almost well again and no doubt will enjoy Christmas as much as ever.

Haynes and Mr. Geo. Roberts, the former winning it. It was a lovely scarf pin. The consolation prizes, a dainty basket and a miniature turkey full of fancy candy were received by Miss Leaffa Wilborn and Mr. H. H. Sayre. Candy and salted nuts were served during the game and a dainty luncheon consisting of chicken salad, sliced turkey, pickles, sandwiches, wafers and coffee, was served at the card tables. ### Masked Men Destroy Two Tobacco Factories.

Princeton, Ky., Dec. 1.—For over an hour last night Princeton was in the hands of 300 masked men, who destroyed the tobacco stemmeryes of J. A. Steger and John Orr, in addition to several other buildings, causing a loss of between $75,000 and $100,000. The stemmeryes which were destroyed were closely identified with the Tobacco Trust, the Steger factory being practically controlled by the Gallaher Limited and the Orr stemmery by the Imperial.

The property loss is as follows: The Steger tobacco factory stemmery building and fixtures, $15,000, insurance $9000.

150,000 pounds of tobacco, insured.

J. G. Orr, tobacco stemmery, building and fixtures, $20,000; partly insured.

250,000 pounds tobacco. E. G. Wood, residence, $1,100 insurance office and fixtures, $1,000 insurance $200.

Clay Coon, residence, $1,000. J. G. Wood, residence, $1,000 insurance $200.

The night riders took possession of the water works, the telephone service, the telegraph offices and even the court house in order to prevent anybody from telling the hell, and disarmed all policemen and kept the firemen within their headquarters. Over two thousand shots were fired, and the daring citizen who stuck his head out of the window quickly withdrew it to the accompaniment of a whiz of bullets and a positive order to get back.

Our Sick.

Miss Nannie Dean who is suffering with pneumonia is reported much better.

Little Miss Fannie Bluff is recovering slowly from an attack of scarletina.

Bob Robinson Remembered By The Elks.

The Benevolent Protective order of Elks is as it is often said composed of the best people on earth. In times of sickness, in the death of our loved ones when one needs friends and often financial help, then the benefits of the order are felt, and in kindly remembering its members who have been call hence is another way in which they let their light shine. An illustration of this is shown here every year. About thanksgiving time when a beautiful floral offering is sent here for Bob Robinson's grave. This year was no exception, they never forget. Saturday night the flowers came, and on Sunday they were tenderly and lovingly placed on the grave by some of the members of the order here.

C. S. Nunn will leave soon for Colorado to spend Christmas with Mrs. Nunn. He expects to return home before New Years day.

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

The Christmas Joy of the Lonely Heart.

While the earth abides there will always be lonely hearts whose loneliness is increased by the general good-fellowship of the season. Sorrow has a way of lifting the latch and coming, an unbidden guest, at some time or other, into every life.
One day all is brightness, the next the world is dark. Among those who are keeping Christmas this year there are some who have to rise above the personal grief in their determination not to cloud the sunshine of others.
How may they best succeed? By the old-fashioned way that leads heroic feet over rough roads and shows that every turn is a shrine where one may stop and worship. The shrine is not visible to all travelers; from some it is hidden, but those who stop there to pray hold within it a cross, and they wreath the cross with flowers. They are lonely themselves, to drop the metaphor, but they do not inflict their sadness on their friends. They invite children to visit them, they carry comfort and cheer to the aged and the infirm. Although their own lives seem shorn of blessing they take pains to be blessed in their ministry.—Margaret E. Sangster in Women's Home Companion for December.

That's It!!!
Cough yourself into a fit of spasms and then wonder why you don't get well. If you will only try a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup your cough will be a thing of the past. It is a positive cure

AUTHOR OF THE MAN ON THE BOX, ETC.

Dicky? Never! I should always be thinking of paper collars!"
"I wish I were witty like that!"
She snuggled down beneath the robes.

An artist's model, thought I. Next in this world. I now understood the drift of her uncle's remark about her earning capacity. The Alice Hawthorne miniatures brought fabulous prices. And here I was, sitting so close to her that our shoulders touched, and she a girl who knew intimately emperors and pretenders and dukes, not to mention the world's tyroch. I admit that for a moment I was touched with awe. And it was beginning to get serious. This girl interested me marvelously. I stood munched up all my courage.

"Are you married?"

No-o.

No engaged to be married?"

No-o. But you mustn't ask all these questions!"

"How would you like to ride around in a first-class motor car the rest of your days?"

She laughed merrily. Possibly it was funny.

Are you always amusing like this?"

Supposing I were serious?"

In that case I should say you had not yet slipped off your fool's mouth!"

This directness was disconcerting.

I wonder if the ten of hearts is lucky after all?" I mused.

"We are not in jail, I consider that the best of good fortune."

"Give me your card," said I.

She gave me the card, and I put it with mine.

Why do you do that?"

Perhaps I want to bring about an enchantment,"—soberly.

"As Signor Fantocini, or as Mr. Constalk?"

I have long since resigned my position in the museum; it was too exciting."

She made no rejoinder, and for some time there was no sound but the noise of the bells.

Finally we drew up under the central porte-cochere of Hollywood Inn, and were welcomed by the genial Moriarty his self, his Celtic countenance a mirror of smiles.

"Anything in the house to eat?" I cried, shaking the robes from me.

"Anything you like, if you like cold things. I can hate ye a pot of coffee on the gasoline-burner, and there's many a vintage in the cellar."

"That will be plenty!"—joyfully, helping Miss Hawthorne to alight.

"Sure, and ye are from the Hunt Club!"—noting our costumes. "Well, well! they diver have any too much grub. Now, I'll putt ye in a little room all be yerselves, with a windy and a log fire; cozy as ye please. Ye'll have nearly two hours to wait for the car from the village."

We entered the general assembly-room. It was roomy and quiet, and somewhere above us was the inevitable room in which George Washington had slept. The great hooded fireplace was merry with crackling logs. Casually I observed that we were not alone. Over yonder, in a shadowed corner, sat two men, very well bundled up, and to all appearances, fast asleep. Moriarty lighted a tour-branched candelabrum and showed us the way to the little private dining room, took our orders, and left us.

"This is romance," said I. "They used to do these things hundreds of years ago, and everybody had a good time."

"It is now all very wicked and improper," murmured the girl, laying aside her domino for the first time; "but delightful! I know that I haven't the least bit of remorse for what I have done."

In that dark evening gown she was very beautiful. Her arms and shoulders were tinted like Carrara marble, and I knew instantly that I was never going to recover. I drew two chairs close to the grate. I sat down in one and she in the other. With a contented sigh she rested her blue-slippered feet on the brass fender.

"My one regret is that I haven't any shoes. What an adventure!"

"It's fine!" Two hours in the society of this enchanting creature! It was almost too good to be true. Ah, if it might always be like this—to return home from the day's work, to be greeted warmly by a woman as beautiful as this one! I sighed loudly.

Moriarty came with the chicken and ham and coffee.

"If ye would like, it won't be a bit of trouble to show ye George Washington's room; or"—with infinite Irish drollery—"I can tell ye that he died in this very room."

"That will serve," smiled the girl; and Moriarty bowed himself out.

His departure was followed by the clatter of silver upon porcelain. Of a truth, both of us were hungry.

"I was simply ravenous," the girl confessed.

"And as for me, I never dreamt I could be so unromantic. Now," said I, pushing aside my plate, and dropping sugar into my coffee, and valy hunting in my pockets for a cigar, "there remains only one mystery to be cleared up."

"And what might this mystery be?" she asked. "The whereabouts of the boys Haggerty?"

"And he is usually witty, too, sir."

William assented.
The girl sat pale and rigid in her chair.

"What do you want?" I demanded gravely.

"For one thing, I should like to question the propriety of a gentleman's sitting down to dine with a lady without having washed his face. The boys Haggerty will never cross our paths again. He has saluted by the light of the moon. No, that's not the mystery. Why did you tell me you were an impostor?"

"I wish I were witty like that!" She snuggled down beneath the robes.

"She leaned on her elbows and smiled at me humorously.

"Would you really like to know, Signor? Well, I was an impostor." She sat with her back to the fire, and a weird halo of light seemed to surround her and frame her. "Mrs. Hyphen Bonds accidentally dropped that invitation in my studio, a few days before she sailed for Europe. I simply could not resist the temptation. That is all the mystery there is."

"And they still think you were there rightly?"

"You are no longer mystified?"

"Yes, there is another mystery to solve, my sir." I knelt with one hand and legged. I was in love, without rhyme or reason. I was and still am."

"Shall you ever be able to solve such a mystery?"—spazically.

"It all depends upon you."

"Mr. Constalk, you will not mar the exquisite humor of our adventure by calling me impudent. I am sure that some day we shall be very good friends. But one does not talk of love on eight hours' acquaintance. Besides, you would be taking advantage of my helplessness, for I really depend upon you to see me safe back to New York. It is only the romance, the adventure; and such moonlight nights often suffice sentimentality. What do you know of me? Nothing. What do I know of you? Nothing. Save that there is a kindred spirit which is always likely to lead us into trouble. Down in your heart you know you are only temporarily affected by moonshine. Come, make me a toast!" lifting her cup.

"You are right," said I. "I am a gentleman. But it was only consistent that, having been the fool, I should now play the ass. Here's—and I held up my cup.

But neither of us drank. There wasn't time.

For the door opened quietly, and in walked the two men we had seen upon the Master Rogue Lighted a Cigarette.

He certainly does not add to your many terrors. You haven't a coke of some there, you, WIPren, have you?"

"No sir!" William's face expressed indescribable enjoyment of the scene.

The girl's mouth twisted. She was struggling to repress the last fire of spite that tickled her lips.

In times like these, said I, determined not to be outdone, we are often the least likely in regard to our personal appetites. I apologize to the lady."

"Fine fire! I sincerely admire you, Mr. Constalk. You have the true spirit of adventure. Haven't he, William?"

He certainly has, sir.

Comes to a private ball without an invitation, and has a merry time of it. Indeed, "To have the perfect sense of humor that is what makes the world go round."

"Aren't you taking extra risk in offering me these pleasures?" I asked. "Risks?" In what manner?"

"The man you see cleverly impersonated is at the club." I do not know what prompted me to put him on his guard.

The rogue laughed lightly. "I know Mr. Haggerty's habits. He is hustling back to New York as fast as he can. He passed here ten minutes ago in the patrol. Hekey clip! He wishes to warn all pawnbrokers and jewellers to be on the lookout for me to-morrow. Ten thousand in a night!"—joyfully.

"A very tidy sum, sir," said William.

"A fourth of which goes to you, my good and faithful friend."

"Thank you, sir," replied William.

"Two cooler rogues I never wish to meet!"

"But wouldn't it be well, sir, to hasten?" asked William.

"We have plenty of time now, my son."

"You have not entered this room," said the girl, her terror slipping from her, "simply to offer these handshakes. What do you wish?"

"What precisely, William?" cried the rogue, taking off a cigar case.

"I don't know what that word means, sir, but as you do, it seems to fit the occasion proper enough."

"It means, William, that this charming young lady sees our visit from afar."

"I had a suspicion, sir, that it might mean that," William leaned against the wall, his heavy eyes twinkling merrily.

The master rogue lighted a cigarette at one of the caudles.

"Pardon me," he said, "but will you join us?" proffering the handsome gold case.

"I took a cigarette and tried it. (I really wanted it.) I would show up well before this girl if I died for it. I blew a cloud of smoke at the candle-flame. There was a spark of admiration in the girl's eyes.

"Mr. Constalk, my respect for you increases each moment." The rogue sat down.

"And to whom might this handsome case belong?" I asked, examining it closely.

"Oh, that has always been mine. There was a time,"—blowing rings at the candle-flame,—when I was respected like yourself, rich, sought after. A woman and a trusted friend: how these often tumble down our beautiful edifices! Yes, I am a scamp, a thief, a rogue; but not because I need the money. No,—with retrospective eyes—"I need excitement, tremendous and continuous, excitement to keep my vigilance and invention alive day and night, excitement to obliterate memory."

"But we can't do it, my friend, we can't do it. Memory is always with us. She is an impartial nemesis; she bags the steps of the righteous and the unrighteous. To obliterate memory, that is it! And where abouts I find this oblivion, save in this life? Huh? Pak! Oh, I have given Haggerty a royal chase. It has been meat and drink to me to fool the cleverest policeman in New York. Till yesterday my face, as a criminal, was unknown to any man or woman, save William here, who was my valet in the old days. I have gone to my clubs, dined, played billiards, in the comedy, a fine comedy! To-morrow William and I sail for Europe. Miss Hawthorne, you wear one of the most exquisite rubies I have ever seen. Permit me to examine it."

Owing to lack of space, part of the President's message will be left out till next week.

Narrowness of mind causes stubbornness. We do not believe what is beyond that which we see.

Our dignity consists in thought, therefore let us contrive to think well, for that is the principle of morals.

Who is the great man? He who is strongest in patience. He who patiently endures injury and maintains a blameless life, he is a man indeed.

The first duty we should teach ourselves is to do unflinchingly each and every duty that devolves on us. Sometimes these seem crosses and are many times a trial but duty well done soon becomes a pleasure in performance.

It takes much labor and many different kinds of material to print a new paper and it takes money to pay for these things. When an editor as list of subscribers that always pay up, he has no trouble in making both ends meet.

The ways of this world are uncertain but an editor is supported it is almost a certainty that the paper will appear regularly. An editor usually is generally right when some one who can article printed free gratis and kindly passed when he does not do it, and when a pay job is wanted it is taken to a job printer that is independent of the paper.

We like to favor our subscribers and ill do so do they will favor us with their work that we can realize $ on money from.

We said before it takes funds to a bright, new and up-to-date newspaper like ours. We hope for our few remarks that you will catch the drift of our words and $p our money. $ $ $.

A man who slanders secretly his neighbor should be shunned. He is like a cup of poison with cream on the surface, in any community, and sooner or later is discarded by all true men.

A move is on foot to have an arch placed at the I. C. depot to be used during arrival and departures of all night trains. This would make the town look up much brighter to strangers and would be worth its cost to one. A cities lights are one of its best advertisements.

Marion, Ky., Dec. 1st, 1906.

Reports are coming in from all parts of the county where over flows took place about damaged corn in the bottoms. It is a very rare occurrence that our rivers over flow their banks this time of the year, and consequently many of our river bottom farmers were not prepared for this unexpected rise.

Mrs. Phil. Deboch has immortalized even the rocks of old Kentucky. She recently returned to the blue grass state from Arkansas where the family lived for a few months. Some one asked her if she was glad to get back to Marion, she said yes unhesitatingly and by way of emphasis added that the rocks in old Kentucky were to her more beautiful than flowers in any other state. In fact she said every rock in Marion looked to her like a rose bush and in full bloom at that.

When Madam Slenderpole announced last Sunday morning that she would not attend Sunday school and church that day, there were a good many questions and surmises in the home of a good natured M. D. who resides on Wilson avenue. One of the children who was named for the sunny south-land ventred to spell out the reason on her fingers for her elder sister and this is what she spelled U-A-Z-Y of course she did that while her gifted actress mother was not looking and listening, but a little bird told the PRESS about it.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Hendel Sayer entertained a few friends at dinner on Thanksgiving day, in honor of the Rev. Benjamin Audres and his bride. Covers were laid for ten, and the dinner which was served in five courses, would have done credit to the table of King Edward himself, as it comprised of many delicacies denied to many less fortunate than the guests on this delightful day. The host and hostess who are never happier than when giving pleasure to others will be remembered long and pleasantly by each one of their guests.

A Home Made Happy by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

About two months ago our baby girl had the measles which settled on her lungs and at last resulted in a severe attack of bronchitis. We had two doctors but no relief was obtained. Every body thought she would die. I went to eight different stores to find a certain remedy which had been recommended to me and failed to get it. When one of the storekeepers insisted that I try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I did stand on baby is alive and well today. Geo. W. SPENCE, Holly Springs, N. C. For Sale by Woods & Odine.

GOVERNMENT WAGES LOW.

H. T. Newcomb Gives Facts of Interest to Wage Earners.

From 1896 to 1901 the average retail cost of the ordinary articles of food used in the United States advanced no less than 17 per cent (17.3%) to be more exact—that is, the purchases of food for a family had to pay $1.17 in 1901 for the same quantity and quality of food that $1 would purchase in 1896. These are official statistics compiled by the highly skilled experts employed by the federal government, and every housewife knows that they do not overstate the advance. Other necessities of life have advanced in cost with approximately equal rapidity.

Unquestionably wages ought, generally speaking, to have advanced somewhat in proportion to the increase in the cost of living. In private employment this has apparently taken place, the average wages per hour reported by the federal bureau of labor being 17.36 per cent higher in 1901 than in 1896 and the average weekly earnings 12.76 per cent higher. The advances thus represented are spread all over the country; they characterize every private industrial enterprise and have benefited all classes of workmen employed in private undertakings.

How is it with public employment? A few undertakings conducted under public ownership employ labor like that similarly serving private employers in the same communities, and in these cases the relative rate of wages has slowly been advanced somewhat in proportion to the advance in the wages privately paid. But where any American government, municipal, state or national, is the sole or by far the largest employer of a particular class of labor the advances to meet increased cost of living have been so few that the ordinary investigator will be unable to discover a single instance.

Throughout the postal service, among the 25,000 clerical employees at Washington in the customs and internal revenue services there have been no advances in pay to meet the rise in cost of food, clothing and shelter. The pay of letter carriers, for example, remains precisely where it was fixed twenty years ago by an act approved Jan. 3, 1887.

The largest printing office in the world is that maintained at Washington by the government, and there the federal government employs a large force of intelligent and highly skilled workmen. A change in the base of payment in 1890 from the piece work to the per hour system prevents comparisons with dates prior to the change, but wages have remained stationary since March 3, 1899, although the official statisticians report that the cost of food has advanced since the rate of wages was fixed by statute fully 12.25 per cent. During the same years the wages of printers in private book publishing or job printing establishments advanced throughout the United States as follows: Compositors, male, 11.97 per cent; compositors, female, 20.50 per cent; press feeders, male, 22.11 per cent; press feeders, female, 21.27 per cent; pressmen, 11.75 per cent. —H. T. Newcomb.

DO YOU OWN A HORSE?

Electric Light Plants Are Like Horses In Some Respects.

The subject of depreciation is well worthy of the careful consideration of those who are prone to ignore the cost in estimating the cost of lights supplied by municipal plants. But as more people own horses than lighting plants it may be helpful to consider depreciation as applied to horses.

You pay $250. for a five-year-old horse. That's original cost. If you borrow the money you must pay interest on it. If you don't borrow it you lose the interest you would get if you didn't buy the horse. Either way it's interest. You feed the horse, and perhaps hire a man to take care of him. That's operating expenses. You get him sick and call in the veterinarian when he is sick. That's renewals and repairs. After a few years, in spite of the best care, the horse is no longer capable of doing the required work and is sold for $50. a loss of $200. as compared with the original cost. That's depreciation. If you haven't laid that year by year out of the horse's earnings, you've got to borrow it to buy a new horse, and you may not find it easy to do so if you haven't repaid the original loan. That's what happens to municipal plants that don't provide an adequate depreciation fund.

Making Peter Pay For Paul.

Whether a public utility be administered by the government itself or by a private corporation, we hold that every person who uses it should be held to pay the cost of the service which he receives and that no man should be compelled by taxation or otherwise to bear any part of his neighbor's expenses for light and power, for telephone service or for transportation of himself or of his goods.

Every proposal that a municipality assume operation of all public utilities and reduce rates to persons using them, regardless of what the service may actually cost, is an attempt to force some men to bear the expenses of others, because where the outlay for operation exceeds earnings the deficit must be made up by taxation, and this we denounce as socialist and therefore hostile to Justice and subversive of democratic government. —Bonnie Eckman.

Senator Sorghum in Doubt. "Do you think that municipal ownership would eliminate graft?"

"I am not quite sure," answered Senator Sorghum, "whether it would eliminate it or simply originate a new kind." —Washington Star.

ROOSEVELT'S ANNUAL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

President Deals with Some New and Important Subjects and He Also Recommends Much Legislation

ASKS FOR INCOME AND INHERITANCE TAX

Believes Such Legislation Is Constitutional and That It Would Curb the Growth of Fortunes to Dangerous Proportions—Asks for Legislation That Will Enable Government to Appeal Criminal Cases in Prosecutions of the Trusts—Would Minimize Injunctions in Labor Troubles—His Views on the Negro Question—Promises a Special Message on Panama Canal—Cuban Intervention, Currency Reform and Many Other Subjects Reviewed.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The following is the full text of President Roosevelt's message to the second session of the Fifty-ninth congress:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: As a nation we still continue to enjoy a literally unprecedented prosperity; and it is probable that only reckless speculation and disregard of legitimate business methods on the part of the business world can materially mar this prosperity.

Our congress in our time has done more good work of importance than the present congress. There were several matters left unfinished at your last session, however, which I most earnestly hope you will complete before your adjournment.

I again recommend a law prohibiting all corporations from contributing to the campaign expenses of any party. Such a bill has already past one house of congress. Let individuals contribute as they desire; but let us prohibit in effective fashion all corporations from making contributions for any political purpose, directly or indirectly.

Another bill which has just past one house of the congress and which is urgently necessary should be enacted into law that conferring upon the government the right to sue in criminal cases on questions of law. The right exists in many of the states; it exists in the District of Columbia by act of the congress. It is of course not proposed that in any case the verdict for the defendant on the merits should be set aside. Recently in one district where the government had indicted certain persons for conspiracy in connection with relatives, the court sustained the defendant and held that with the exception of an indictment for conspiracy to obtain rebates had been sustained by the court, convictions obtained under it, and two defendants sentenced to imprisonment. The two cases referred to may not be in any way connected with each other, but it is unfortunate that there should even be an apparent conflict. At present there is no way by which the government can cause such a conflict, when it comes to trial, to be avoided by going to a higher court; and the winds of justice are blocked without my real decision of the question. I can not too strongly urge the passage of the bill in question. A failure to pass will result in seriously that basis—that is, if this discrimination in favor of this particular shipper was made with an intent to avoid the 25 cent rate and the tariff rate was maintained as against their competitors—the result might be and not improbably would be that the competitors would be driven out of business. This crime is one which in its nature is obnoxious to every man of any other type, who shows himself in the presence of arrogant disorder, or who on insufficient grounds grants an injunction that does grave injustice, or who in his capacity as a contractor, and therefore in his position as the legal agent of the government, shirks the cause of decent government. The judge has a power over which no review can be exercised, and the sit is in review upon the acts of both the trial and the legal branches of the government, so that in the most extraordinary cases he is amenable only at the bar of public opinion and it is unwise to minimize that public opinion in reference to a man with such power shall neither be exposed nor led.

The best judges have ever been foremost to disclaim any immunity from punishment. This has been true since the days of the great English Lord Chancery for Parker, who said: "I am a member of another race, is it not fitting in such fashion that it seems as if not the individual criminal, but the whole race, is attacked? the result is to exasperate to the highest degree race feelings, and it is only natural that with such a dealing with black men as with white men it is the same rule that must be applied in dealing with rich men and poor men, that is, to treat each man according to his crime, his conduct, or his social position, with a good conscience on his real worth as a man. White people owe it quite as much to themselves as to the colored race to treat well the colored man who shows by his conduct that he deserves such treatment; for it is surely the best wisdom to encourage in the colored race all those individuals who are honest, industrious, law-abiding, and who therefore make good and safe neighbors and citizens. Reward or punish the individual, but do not let the community, the state, or the nation, be contaminated by such heinous acts as the ordinary common, vulgar crimes which come before criminal courts constantly for punishment and which arise from sudden passion or temptation. The crime in this case was committed by a man of education and of large business experience, whose business standing in the community was such that they might have been expected to be an example of obedience to law upon the maintenance of which alone in this country the security of their property depends. It was committed on behalf of a great railroad corporation, which, like other railroad corporations, received its authority from the state laws and valuable privileges for the public's convenience and its own, which performs quasi public functions and which is charged with the special obligation in the action of its business to treat the citizens of this country alike, and not to carry on its business with unjust discriminations between different citizens or different classes of citizens. This crime in the case is one which is only partially due to the man and proof of which is very difficult to obtain. The interstate commerce act was passed in 1887, nearly 20 years ago. Ever since that time complaints of the practice of rebates by railroads has been common, urgent, and persistent, and the congress has repeatedly past legislation endeavoring to put a stop to this evil, the difficulties of obtaining proof upon which to bring prosecution in these cases is so great that in the case of this, as in every other case that has ever been brought in this court, and, as I am informed, this case and one recently brought in Philadelphia are the only cases that have ever been brought to the criminal part of this court. In fact, but few cases of this kind have ever been brought in this country, east or west. Now, under these circumstances, I am forced to the conclusion, in the case in which the proof is so clear and the case in which the proof is so clear and the court to fix a penalty which shall in some degree be commensurate with the gravity of the offense. As between the two defendants, in my opinion, the principal penalty should be imposed on the corporation. The other man in this case, presumably, acted without any advantage to himself and without any interest in the transaction, either by his own act or by his concurrence with what he understood to be the policy or the wishes of his employer.

Sound Judgment of the People.
There is one consideration which should be taken into account by the good people who carry a sound judgment on an appeal, relating to any criticism of a judge's decision. The instinct of the American people as a whole is sound in this matter. They will not subscribe to the doctrine that any public servant is to be above criticism. In the case of the negro, who is above criticism, it is a sound judgment, that most competent to express their judgment in such matters, and above all those belonging to the great and honorable profession of the bar, and particularly the bar of the American life, take the position that there should be no criticism of a judge under any circumstances, their view will not be accepted by the American people as a whole. In such event the people will and must demand that the judge be impeached against the acceptance by the people of his own property. It is a sound judgment that the people must trust to the court and deliberate judgment of all the people as their best vindication.

Eviction by Tenants.
In connection with this matter, I would like to call attention to the very unsatisfactory state of our criminal law, and the large part from the habit of setting aside the judgments of the courts on technicalities absolutely unconnected with the merits of the case, and where there is no attempt to show that there has been any failure of substantial justice. It would be well to enact a law providing for the effect of such a judgment in a misrepresentation of justice.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM.
President Says Mob Law is a Menace to the Country.
In my last message I suggested the enactment of a law in connection with the issuance of injunctions, setting out having been sharply drawn to the mind of the nation that the right of applying injunctions in labor cases should be denied the demand that the right of applying injunctions in labor cases should be wholly abolished. It is at least doubtful whether a law abolishing altogether the right of injunctions would not be better than the test of the courts, in which case, of course, the legislation would be ineffective. Moreover, I believe it would be wrong altogether to prohibit the use of injunctions, or to condemn them per se, with the demand that the right of applying injunctions in labor cases should be wholly abolished. It is at least doubtful whether a law abolishing altogether the right of injunctions would not be better than the test of the courts, in which case, of course, the legislation would be ineffective. HOGWALLOW ITEMS.

Pike Easley is cleaning off the ground in his horse lot for the construction of a pond. He will put a heavy rock foundation to it as he intends to raise some large fish next season.

A deep frost fell here this week and made the earth look very fuzzy. Tobe Moseley's rooster was caught out in it but Tobe upon the approach of the frost had presence of mind enough to hoist an umbrella over him.

Sap Spradlen has learned something new during the past few days and will have to get a larger hat.

Fit Smith is fast getting well again. On his road to recovery he will stop off at Tickville for a few days.

Possum time is here. At the big meeting Saturday the deputy constable was instructed to tie lanterns on all the possums on Musket Ridge so that it will be no trouble to find them.

After Raz Barlow taken Miss Gonola Henstep out driving in his cart some horse hairs were seen on his coat. This looked quite suspicious as Raz drove a mule.

The sunset one hour ahead of time Sir Flinders watch the other evening and several of our citizens were caught out in the dark without lanterns.

Fletcher Henstep has broke the record in successfully raising the smallest pumpkin. It is fully developed, having the rich, yellow color and ridges in it and is not quite as large as a buckshot. He is justly proud of it and as soon as it was full grown he hitched up his yoke of steers and hurried it to the postoffice; a corner of the room was cleared and it was put on exhibition.

The wife of Joe what-s-his-name living in hollowing distance of Bye Straw is fixing to entertain with an owl social tonight in honor of her husband who has been dead for the past year.

Sid Hocks, Ellite Hellwanger and Raz Barlow took a small jug of Moonlight Beer Saturday night and took possession of a dance at the home of Luke Mathewson, who lives in shooting distance of the Bye Straw grave yard. The constable was shot through the hat and had to be carried home. The Excelsior Fiddling band got excited and left the house without finishing the tune they were playing, and will play the remainder of it at beginning of the next dance.

Fit Smith is busy turning out someicker for the Christmas festivities. It will be flavored with the rippling waters of Gander Creek and will be so strong that it will warp the letters on the jug.

When the cats are away they make hay while the sun shines.

Gam Sims looked into the eastern yesterday and saw himself in the water. He will get a ladder and go down and talk to himself today.

It is a straight lane that has no turning.

When in doubt use a fine comb.

FREE ADVICE TO LOVERS.

No, Laura, hoops are not worn any more except on barrels.

Kind Editor Botts: I am 23 years of age and have a girl who contends that she does not love me, yet I believe she does. What would you do about it? Q. S. N.

Well, you should not attempt to marry while you are 23, that being an ill-fated age.

You might put her to a test, however, by attempting suicide.

Go to the nearest reliable drug store and purchase a pint of carbolic acid diluted with nitroglycerine and drink it on her front doorstep. If she weeps at the funeral she loved you.

Dear Editor of Hugwaller: I have had nothing to eat for six days, and have had a intense longing for something. Can you tell me what it is?

After giving your ease much thought perhaps you are hungry.

My finance promised to meet me at the corner in the shadow of the telephone pole last night at 7:18 o'clock. I waited until sunrise but she never showed up. Now why? Ernest Ernest.

Dear Ernest: We do not know as we haven't had a chance to see her since then.

Dear Editor I have a serious case. I met a young woman a day or two ago, since which time she has treated me kindly. This has terribly upset me and I cannot sleep at night as something keeps worrying me. An immediate answer is my wish. M.

Investigate the bed closely and if you find that it is not bugs or mosquitoes you are in love.

Nell, in eating hickory nuts always remove the shell, as they are hard to digest.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

The Discontented Lion

A old lion named Leo, who had lived in a circus tent for many years, grew very tired of the life he led and said: "Here I am caged up, with only half enough to eat, and all these strange people staring at me, and the men who run this show make all of the money and have a good time too. I'm tired of it and intend to escape at the very first opportunity, find a partner and go into business for myself."

So one morning when the animal keeper opened the barred door to feed the lion old Leo gave one spring.

HE WAS FAR OUT IN THE COUNTRY, knocked over the keeper and did not stop running until he was far out in the country, tired, thirsty and hungry. The next morning he started out to look for partners, but as soon as any of the other animals saw him they would run away in terror, never giving Leo the opportunity to tell of his wonderful plans.

After wandering about for several days without being able to find anything to eat he determined to go back to the circus, but when he reached the town the circus had left, and as every one was afraid of Leo, some men formed a company, armed themselves and shot him on sight.

Moral:—Don't be too ambitious.—Atlanta Constitution.

Foley's Honey and Tar was recommended and one tiny little bottle entirely cured me of asthma which had been growing on me for twelve years. If I had taken it at the start I would have saved years of suffering." Woods & Orme.

Hear Sir:—Will say in regard to advertisement placed in your paper several weeks ago by M. C. O'Hara, that I am still at O'Hara, Ky., (commonly known as Cedar Bluff, Ky.) and intend staying here for a number of years. I am at present doing the practice for the employees of the F. W. Katterjohn Construction Company under contract, also most the practice in the surrounding country, and will also state that the practice in the surrounding country will not justify the service of another doctor.

Yours most respectfully,

DR. JNO. R. JONES.

"The Old Blue Bear and the Rabbit."

An unpublished poem by Eugene Field is a rare literary treat for both old and young. The wonderful sympathy and love for his children shows strongly in these verses from the poem published in the December number of the Women's Home Companion for the first time:

A big blue Bear came up one day
And to the Rabbit's ma said he:
I've come to take your child away
To roam the fields and woods with me."

Then Rabbit's mama said, "Oh no,
You big blue Bear, you shall not take
My little Rabbit wandering so
Unless you've lots of jelly-cake."

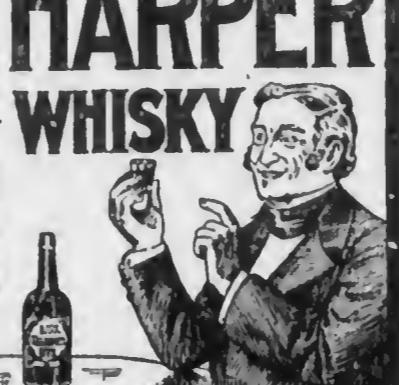

The Bear replied, you need not fear
To let the Rabbit go with me,

For I have lots of goodies here.

As you yourself can plainly see."

And saying thus, the old blue Bear
Buck from his bag the cover threw,
And mamma saw the goodies there—
The jelly-cake and candy, too.

CAVE-IN-ROCK.

In a saloon brawl here one day last week there were several licks, two shots and great deal of loud profanity. Result, two or three skinned heads a good man with a helpless and dependent family narrowly escapes death and two or three poor men are fined, thus spending money with which they should have bought shoes and clothing for their children.

Great art thou whiskey?

If the Press cares to have such news as the above we can probably furnish something of the kind each week, but it is only a repetition of the old, old story which is told and retold hundreds of times every day.

All the members of the family were present except those that had been cut off by the hand of death, such is the case in this life, when we have our family reunions, here some are missing from our family circle.

There is hardly a family that the death angel has not visited, and taken some loved one from our fond embrace. But glory be to God when we get to Heaven there be no broken family there, if we live for God in this life, and we then hear the welcome applause come ye blessed of my father inherit the Kingdom prepared for you.

Morganfield's View of it.

A large audience gathered at the Grund last Friday night to hear the debate between representatives of the Morganfield and Marion High schools.

The subject for discussion was: "Resolved, That the United States is following in the footsteps of Ancient Rome." Morganfield had the affirmative and won out by a vote of two to one. The speakers for Morganfield were Paul Schmidt, Miss Verlie Cuffman and Thomas Waller. Marion was represented by V. G. Rochester, Miss Fenwick Wathen and Miss Annie Dean. The judges were: C. E. Sugg, of Henderson, J. P. Knott, of Nashville and A. L. Sloan, of Louisville.

A large crowd of backers followed the Marion team to the opposing city.

The subject for discussion was: "Resolved, That the United States is following in the footsteps of Ancient Rome."

Morganfield took the affirmative side and Marion the negative.

Morganfield was ably represented by Mr. Paul Schmidt, Miss Verlie Cuffman and Mr. Thomas Waller.

Morganfield was ably represented by V. G. Rochester, Miss Fenwick Wathen and Miss Annie Dean.

The judges, who were non-residents of both Morganfield and Marion, while praising the able way in which the Marion representatives defended their side, gave the decision to Morganfield. The decision of the judges as read by Mr. C. E. Sugg, of Henderson, is published below in full:

"The judges are reluctant to decide, even though they assumed the obligation with the expectation that its fulfillment would not be pleasant.

"They feel, however, that the pleasures of the evening far outweigh this one unpleasant task.

"They beg to be permitted to take advantage of the opportunity to very heartily commend the teachers who are responsible for this enterprise, and express their appreciation of the young ladies and gentlemen who have participated, and to congratulate them upon their selection by their fellow-pupils, and upon the fact that they have all acquitted themselves well.

"By a vote of two to one, we beg to say that the decision is in favor of the affirmative."

In addition to the debate, an entertainment program was rendered.

Miss Nellie Shoemaker delighted

the audience with a beautiful violin solo, Miss Jimmie Noe and a sextet of schoolgirls, captivated the audience and were encored several times.

Mr. Travay Young sang a solo, and

Misses Emma Noe and Grace Dyer rendered a beautiful duet.

Altogether, it was a delightful entertainment. The visitors from Marion were as pleasant and agreeable as could be, and we hope to have them with us again some day soon.—

THE CURE FOR YOUR DISEASE
Delivered Free—Free for the Asking—Free to You.

I want to give them the proof—the evidence and the glory of new life in their own bodies—and I want to pay the cost of this proof—all of it—to the very last cent—myself.

I have put my life into this work—I hold the record that I can cure every disease—but I have thousands of cures to prove better—my hands are strong and big and well; and their fingers are in my hands to prove every word I say.

Rheumatism, kidney trouble, heart disease, partial paralysis, bladder troubles, stomach and bowels troubles, piles, cystitis, bronchitis, weak lungs, asthma, heart trouble, constipation, tenal trouble, lumbago, skin diseases, scrofula, impure blood, general debility, organical sclerosis, etc., are cured to remain and continue cured.

No matter how you are, no matter what your disease, I will have the remedies sent to you and given into your own hands free, paid for by me and delivered at my own cost.

These Remedies Will Cure

They have cured thousands of cases—nearly every disease—and they do cure and there is no reason why they should not cure you—make you well—and bring you back to health and the joy of living!

Will you let me do this for you—will you let me do this for the sick and suffering? Are you willing to trust a master physician? Are you only asking this offer but publishes it and then sends the test and proof of his remedies without a penny of cost to anyone except himself?

Send your name, your Post Office address and airmail address to me, and I will do my utmost to satisfy every doubt you have or raise that these remedies will save your life and make it all that nature meant to make it.

Let me make you well. Give me your name and tell me how you feel, and the proof treatment of you, at my cost. No bills of any kind, no paper,—nothing—but my absolute good will and good faith.

"I'm sure," said Arabella,
"It would be very nice,
If lions, wolves and tigers
Would eat nothing else but mice.
"Then lambs and deer and camels
Could live together free,
With no one to annoy them—
I'm sure that would please me.
"Because, to be quite truthful,
At night I sometimes dread,
That some big wolf or lion
Might bite off all my head.
"And it would be nicer,
And better for my mind,
If lions, wolves and tigers
To mice were more inclined."
